

Woman Is Deported To Germany Under The African Quota

Teuton Citizenship Papers Fail to Win Entry Into Country, as She Admits Her Birth in Cape Town

Miss Margherita Runge, a young woman born in South Africa, but claiming to be a German subject, was deported on the steamship Orbita, which sailed Saturday for Hamburg. Miss Runge is a sister of Miss M. Runge, who was deported from Cape Town on September 27. She was sent to Ellis Island, after admitting she had been born in Cape Town. There she showed papers which she said had been issued by the American Consul at Hamburg and declared he had assured her she would be admitted to the country. Mr. Muller appealed to Washington on her behalf, but his plea was rejected by the immigration authorities in the technical point that "birth shall determine nationality." It was not until after she had actually been deported that Mr. Muller was notified of the government's decision.

The only explanation given by the government was that the immigration laws can come to the United States from Africa until 1923. "Alone and weeping aboard the Orbita, Miss Runge made the following statement just before she was deported: "It puzzles me to think that Americans should have such a cruel law. I am in no sense an African. My father was a South African from Germany and never relinquished his German citizenship. "It is true that I was born there and remained there until I was twenty-one but I was not particular about preserving my citizenship papers showing that I am and always have been a German subject. I showed these papers to Ellis Island officials, to no avail. I showed them to the American Consul, before I came here, and he vouched for my passport, with the assurance that the quota law would not stop me. "I might have gone to the Ellis Island with less risk of barbarous treatment."

General Weather Conditions: The indications are for mostly cloudy weather and probably local rain to-morrow and Tuesday. In the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the Atlantic Gulf states, there will be little change in temperature to-morrow, while cooler weather will spread the lower part of the region, the Ohio and middle Mississippi valleys and the middle Atlantic States on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Storm warnings remain displayed from Mobile, Ala., to Tampa, Fla.

The disturbance over the eastern Gulf of Mexico was central some distance south of Appalachicola to-night and apparently moving slowly northward.

Pressure was relatively low and falling, most generally over the United States to-night and it was high and rising over the western coast.

There have been showers within the last twenty-four hours in the lake region, the middle Mississippi Valley, and the Ohio and Gulf states and the Atlantic states from south to north.

The temperature somewhat higher today in the Ohio Valley and the Atlantic States and it was lower in the Canadian Northwest.

Forecast by Districts: Eastern New York: Mostly cloudy to-day and to-morrow; probably local rains; cooler in interior to-morrow.

New England, New Jersey and Delaware: Mostly cloudy to-day and to-morrow; probably local rains; not much change in temperature.

Eastern Pennsylvania and Maryland: Mostly cloudy to-day and to-morrow; probably local rains; cooler to-morrow afternoon or to-morrow night.

Bedtime Stories

Reddy and Mrs. Reddy Investigate

By Thornton W. Burgess

Headlessness to tempt fate! Ere you act investigate.

—Old Granny Fox.

When Sammy Jay told Reddy Fox that he had seen Farmer Brown's children in a tree back of the henhouse, Reddy knew whether to believe it or not. You see, he is always very careful of Sammy Jay. He knows what a mischief-maker Sammy is. However, he hunted up Mrs. Reddy and they talked it over.

"I think Sammy told the truth," Reddy said. "At least, I think that the danger of ours is in trouble of some kind."

"Why do you think so?" asked Mrs. Reddy. "You know as well as I do that there is nothing Sammy Jay would enjoy more than getting us up there for nothing."

"True enough," replied Reddy. "The Hound is barking as he barks only when he has some one cornered. I heard him when he first started out, and he was crying Fox! Fox! Fox! as the top of his lungs."

"I thought he had found your trail, but after a few minutes he began to bark the way he does when he has found the one he was chasing but can't get at him. If he was not chasing you he must have been chasing one of our children. What are we going to do about it?"

"We are going to go up there and find out for ourselves just what has happened," said Mrs. Reddy in her most decided way.

So together they started for Farmer Brown's. They went the same way the young Fox had gone, keeping in the bushes along the stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard. When they reached the end of the stone wall they were not far from the henhouse and they could see what was going on there. There was a barrel standing on end. Across the top of the barrel was a board and on the board was a stone. Sitting close by and watching that barrel was the Hound. He wasn't barking now, but it was plain to see that he was very much interested in that barrel and was keeping a sharp watch on it.

Neither Reddy nor Mrs. Reddy could understand how one of their children could possibly be in that barrel.

Dr. Sheets, Fuel Official, Injured in Auto Mishap

Occupant of Other Car Also Badly Hurt in Collision in Yonkers

Dr. Elmer Sheets, fuel administrator for Westchester County and resident of Yonkers, was injured in a collision between the automobile in which he was riding and a touring car driven by Edward Christman, of 723 Eleventh Avenue, Manhattan. Both cars were badly damaged.

The head of Joseph Curran, of 731 Eleventh Avenue, an occupant of Christman's car, was killed. He was removed to Yonkers Hospital. No arrests were made.

Motorman Held for 2 Deaths

Homicide Charged in Killing of Mr. and Mrs. Steele

Peter Drew, twenty-three years old, motorman on the Ralph Avenue trolley car which collided with an automobile Saturday night, causing the deaths of John Steele and his wife, Emily, was held in $1,000 bail in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday on the charge of homicide. He was released on this bail for a hearing on October 28.

Steele was killed outright when the trolley collided with the car driven by his daughter Emily at Ralph Avenue and Hancock Street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Steele died several hours later. Miss Steele and her younger sister Marie were slightly injured and Mrs. Anna Kelly, fifty years old, of 179 Church Street, was removed to the Bushwick Hospital suffering from possible internal injuries and a broken leg. They were pinned beneath the automobile.

NEW-AU QUATRIEME

Antique Italian file lace strips

A collection of 171 to secure which Au Quatrieme's representative personally scoured Italy last summer.

To be sold at half their market prices today

Au Quatrieme was confident that these pieces were as genuinely old and unusually fine as they were represented to be, and that they were a great find, since antique file lace is every year scarcer and there is actually very little of it to be had in New York. But, to make doubly sure, we have had them examined by several lace experts who not only proclaim them to be genuinely old, but assure us that our estimates of their market grades are conservative.

Notwithstanding the rarity and beauty of these old file lace they are offered at the following prices:—

83 strips $40 grade for 52 strips $60 grade for 36 strips $80 grade for

$20 each $30 each $40 each

Their sizes

The strips vary in length from 2 yards 5 in. to 8 yards 3 in. and average 14 in. in width.

We have compared them with other file lace strips being sold in New York. We find that modern file lace, most of which does not follow these old designs, sells for as much or almost as much as the prices at which we are marking these antiquities.

Children's Hair-cutting Salon Barber Shop

Telephone 4700 Struyvesant

When every one had made up her mind what the new mode was to be, and the openings of the great houses were over, our Paris representative went shopping for the Women's Fashion Salons.

Tucked away in the little streets, off the Rue de la Paix, are perhaps the most truly Parisienne of all the dressmakers.

"Les Petites Maisons"

for they make only the frocks selected and sponsored by the smart women in Paris. Here she chose the ones she thought most indicative of the true French fashions.

Our own importations

Twill coat frocks—for this is truly a coat frock season—each with its own brilliant touch.

Fine very flatly woven crepe de chine frocks—with the most adorable bits of trimming and that subtle simplicity only achieved by French frocks.

Dinner frocks—of lace and chiffon, with fascinating silhouettes.

Beaded velvet evening gowns—chosen because they are so unlike the usual importations.

And, because they come to us straight from their makers, they are ever so moderately priced.

$85 to $198

SHOPS FOR MEN — STREET FLOOR

Men's Clothing Standards that went down during the war are now higher than ever Wanamaker specifications in their completeness were first established some 20 years ago. Their severity amazed the clothing industry at that time. But constantly we strove to improve them, adding one detail here, another there, until finally we had the highest specifications standard in America.

Then Came the War

with its lowering of all conventions and standards. Skilled workmen were obtainable only with great difficulty and in limited numbers, while material of the usual high Wanamaker standard was practically off the market.

We did the best we could—we fought against the lowering of standards—and when we were finally forced to give way, we did not surrender completely. Moreover, we resolved that, the war won, our standards should be raised again—made higher, if possible, than ever.

And so today

Our Pre-war Standards are Back—

Yes, even, in some respects, Wanamaker clothing is manufactured according to a higher standard than before the war.
